

How many of us like hot chocolate with whipped cream and marshmallows?

At this time of year hot chocolate always seems to make things better.

Why not take the opportunity of sitting down (I would say in front of the fire, if you had one) altogether.

While you are all slowly enjoying your hot chocolates, share stories with each other. It might be picking up a story book or it could be making one up as you go along. You could even take turns in adding bits to the story.

I wonder how many budding authors we have out there
